THE BUSINESS OF GLOBAL CHINESE TRAVEL

Kim Leitzes founded PARKLU in 2011 because she knew there had to be a better way for brands to work with Chinese influencers.

Since then, global brands such as Apple, Unilever, Estée Lauder, Lululemon, Booking.com, and the NBA have all used PARKLU to launch highly successful KOL marketing campaigns in China.

The company puts China's top content creators all on one platform and adds comprehensive, real-time campaign tracking software and analytics. PARKLU regularly works with companies small and large, from independent labels to Fortune 100 multinationals.

With PARKLU's platform, marketing teams can save hours of research, improve their communication with KOLs, and track campaigns automatically using marketing technology built in-house. The web-based platform and app compiles essential data from across all of China's social media networks and lets you automate influencer payments, reporting and other time-consuming tasks.

We're proud to have been featured in The New York Times, Forbes, Ad Age, Campaign, CCTV, WWD, Retail in Asia, TechNode, and Jing Daily.

How do foreign brands create their Chinese names?

If you're thinking about the Chinese market seriously, finding your Chinese name is the first thing you should do.

Translation & Localization services with LITAO:
we help you find the right words.

Let's say we want to develop a Chinese name for the brand Tinggly.

Tinggly.com is completely evolving the way gifts are given and received. With more than 1000+ travel and adventure experiences to choose from in over 100+ countries, the gifter offers the recipient the opportunity to choose from a hugely impressive hand-picked collection of amazing and unique experiences. Despite the continuously growing demand from discerning Chinese travelers, Tinggly doesn't yet have a Chinese name.

To begin with, we would have to find Chinese characters that make you 'tingle', convey the idea of gifting, and have an international feel.

The two characters would have to be phonetically loyal to the original, so we first choose syllables that are the closest match to 'tinggly':

Ting

Ting tīng tíng tǐng tìng

Dīng dīng dǐng dǐng

Tēng tēng

Dēng dēng dēng dēng

Etc.

gly

Lǐ lǐ lǐ

Líng líng líng líng

Lěi lěi lěi lěi

Lín lín lín lín

We are left with 49 potential syllables and over 700 individual characters to choose from. We now need to identify the most relevant combinations visually, phonetically and semantically and verify that the names are not registered trademarks in relevant categories.

Here are some of our choices:

Sam崔

Originally from San Francisco, I double majored in International Business and Chinese while in university, which led me to take two study abroad trips, one in Taipei, and one in Nanjing and Shanghai. I then proceeded to work as a stylist assistant in Taipei for a few months, before transitioning into a fashion buyer at an ecommerce brand in Shanghai. Shortly after arriving in Shanghai, I became a frequent user of Chinese social media apps like KuaiShou, Weibo, and Xiaohongshu to share my style and sometimes my cooking.

Q: Why do you choose to live in China? Tell me about your impression of the city you live in.

A: I like the fast pace of many of the first tier cities in China. I always found San Francisco to be very slow paced. I've been living in Chengdu going on two years now, and although for the most part it is also a pretty slow-paced city, you can find the rush when you need it.

Q: What influenced you to become a KOL?

A: Initially, I didn't really have an interest in "becoming a KOL", I was just sharing the content that I found interesting, and some people also found it interesting, so they started following me, and now we're here.

Q: How do you think the KOL industry in China is different from that in foreign countries?

A: I feel like the environment is a lot more developed in China than in many other countries, and a lot more accessible. It seems like there are agencies for all levels and types of KOLs in China, whereas it seems like many agencies in the US are pretty much relegated only to those influencers with 1m+ followers.

Q: What distinguishes you from other KOLs in this field?

A: Although there are many foreign KOLs in China, the majority are all more comedy-focused, while the main successful fashion KOLs are all Chinese.

Q: What are your main social media platforms? How do you usually attract followers?

A: Xiaohongshu, KuaiShou, Douyin, and Weibo. I usually try to be very timely with sending out content, best case scenario is to have new content every day, but that's become difficult as more content has gone from photos to video.

Q: What are your followers like? How do you interact with them on a daily basis?

A: The majority of my followers are younger, university age. I'll typically have interactions pertaining to how to adapt to specific new trends.

Q: What are your hobbies and interests outside work?

A: After beginning my transition into more video based content, I've developed a real passion for video editing and sfx work. I'd love to get more into the digital media and marketing side of that kind of work.
